

Dearly Beloved Friends

Henry James's Letters to Younger Men

Susan E. Gunter
Steven H. Jobe, Editors

Ann Arbor

THE UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN PRESS

Copyright © by Susan E. Gunter and Steven H. Jobe 2001

All rights reserved

Published in the United States of America by

The University of Michigan Press

Manufactured in the United States of America

♻️ Printed on acid-free paper

2004 2003 2002 2001 4 3 2 1

No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted in any form
or by any means, electronic, mechanical, or otherwise, without the written permission of the publisher.

A CIP catalog record for this book is available from the British Library.

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

James, Henry, 1843–1916.

Dearly beloved friends : Henry James's letters to younger men / Susan E. Gunter, Steven H. Jobe, editors.

p. cm.

Includes index.

ISBN 0-472-11009-8 (cloth : alk. paper)

1. James, Henry, 1843–1916—Correspondence. 2. James, Henry, 1843–1916—
Relations with men. 3. James, Henry, 1843–1916—Friends and associates. 4. Authors,
American—19th century—Correspondence. 5. Authors, American—20th century—
Correspondence. I. Gunter, Susan E., 1947– II. Jobe, Steven H. 1956– III. Title.

PS2123 .A4 2002

813'.4—dc21

[B]

2001048036

Page i: Sample from a letter from Henry James to Dudley Jocelyn Persse, Houghton bMS 1094.1 (1905). Courtesy of the Houghton Library,
Harvard University, and Bay James.

Acknowledgments

This volume has been made possible by Bay James, literary executor of the Henry James estate, who graciously granted unrestricted permission for publication of the letters and generously shared with us her knowledge of the James family. Our thanks for publication permission go as well to the several libraries housing the letters: to the Clifton Waller Barrett Library, Special Collections Department, University of Virginia Library for use of James's letters to Hendrik C. Andersen; to the Houghton Library, Harvard University for use of James's letters to both Dudley Jocelyn Persse and Howard O. Sturgis; and to the Harry Ransom Humanities Research Center, University of Texas at Austin, for use of James's letters to Hugh Walpole. The late Sir Rupert Hart-Davis permitted us to quote from Hugh Walpole's diaries, now at the Humanities Research Center, in our annotations to the letters. Various other permissions for the use of archival material are acknowledged in the notes and in the illustration credits.

The idea for what are in some ways companion volumes of James's letters—this edition of selected letters to younger men and an earlier volume, Dear Munificent Friends: Henry James's Letters to Four Women (University of Michigan Press, 1999)—grew out of conversations in Cambridge in 1994 between Susan Gunter and David Lehman, who provided excellent advice and encouragement. Work on this volume has since benefited enormously from the unstinting advice or the prior work of friends, of James scholars, and of friends who are James scholars: John Kimmey of the University of South Carolina; Philip Horne of University College, London; Sheldon Novick of Vermont Law School; Robert Gale, Professor Emeritus at the University of Pittsburgh; Roberta A. Sheehan, of the Boston Athenaeum; Rayburn Moore, Professor Emeritus of the University of Georgia, and Margaret Moore; Adeline Tintner of New York City; and the late Leon Edel. While they bear no responsibility for the weaknesses of this edition, they deserve much credit for whatever virtue may be found herein.

We are indebted as well to our home institutions for crucial research support in the form of both time and funding. Grants from the Gore Faculty Development Fund at Westminster College of Salt Lake City sustained the research of Susan Gunter, while the Faculty Development Committee of Hanover College generously supported the work of Steve Jobe. At Westminster, necessary support and encouragement, including a merit leave, were always forthcoming from Dr. Stephen Baar, Academic Vice-President, and Dr. Ray Ownbey, Dean of Arts and Sciences. At Hanover, the Faculty Development Committee was instrumental in approving and proposing to the Vice-President for Academic Affairs, to the President, and to the Board of Trustees both a sabbatical and a Spring Term leave for Steve Jobe. In an age of declining public commitment to research in the humanities, such support of scholarship by private colleges and their donors deserves particular recognition.

Librarians, curators, and archivists from numerous institutions facilitated our work at every stage: at Westminster College's Giovale Library (Dick Wunder, Oresta Esquibel, Tanya Stasny, David Hales, Hildy Benham, Diane Raines), at Hanover College's Duggan Library (Lori Ferguson, Laurel Carter, Heather Bennett), at the Houghton Library (Leslie Morris, Melanie Wisner, Susan Halpert, Jennie Rathbun, Denison Beach, and others), at the Harry Ransom Humanities Research Center at the University of Texas at Austin (Cathy Henderson, Tara Wegner), in the Special Collections Department of the University of Virginia Library (Michael Plunkett, Greg Johnson, Sharon Defibaugh, Margaret Hrabe, Virginia Smyers), at the Cambridge University Library (Kathleen Cann), at Oxford University's Bodleian Library (Steven Tomlinson), at Yale University's Beinecke Library (Alfred Mueller), in the Rare Book and Manuscript Department of McGill University's McLennan Library (Richard Virr), and at the Redwood Library and Athenaeum in Newport, Rhode Island (Maris Humphreys). Patricia Teter of the Getty Museum provided timely assistance in identifying some of James's more esoteric reading.

Throughout this project able research assistants—Jennifer McLing and Natalie Martinez at Westminster; Miranda Bailey, Mandy Blythe, John Connell, and Drew Eisenhut at Hanover—searched out obscure individuals, labored over transcripts, compiled calendars, and patiently rode herd over piles of paper on our office floors. Helen Hodgson's students Janice Eberhardt, Deborah Pearson, and Elizabeth Sweeten from Westminster College's Professional Communications graduate program edited our introduction for style and flow.

Special thanks are due to Elizabeth Kaplan and Marissa Walsh of the Ellen Levine Agency for finding a home for this project at the University of Michigan Press. There, LeAnn Fields and her editing team deserve praise for their expertise in shepherding this manuscript through the publication process.

Finally, our gratitude continues to flow to two families—to Terry and Phillip Jobe; to Bill, Colin, Jennifer, Ben, and Dan Gunter—for unending patience, encouragement, and tolerance.

Contents

Editors' Note	xi
Biographical Register	xv
Chronology	xxi
Introduction	I
LETTERS TO
Hendrik Andersen	15
Jocelyn Persse	83
Howard Sturgis	115
Hugh Walpole	175
Index	239
Illustrations	following page 104