POLITICAL SCIENCE AT UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN PRESS

University of Michigan Press is an award-winning publisher of books aligned with key strengths of the university, and an integral part of Michigan Publishing—the hub of scholarly publishing at the University of Michigan and part of its dynamic and innovative University Library. This catalog showcases the best new scholarship in political science, including bold new work in electoral politics, international relations, comparative politics, and methodology. These books primarily appeal to scholars, policy wonks, and practitioners, and many are appropriate for classrooms and institutional libraries. Kindly send manuscript queries to Senior Acquiring Editor for Political Science, Elizabeth Sherburn Demers, Ph.D. (esdemers@umich.edu).

FULCRUM

Fulcrum is our publishing platform optimized for digital scholarship, built by publishers and libraries to present the richness of humanities research in a durable, discoverable, and flexible form. It allows for the display and preservation of video, audio, or other interactive media that supplement the research. Find out more at www.fulcrum.org.

OPEN ACCESS AT UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN PRESS

At the University of Michigan Press, open access (OA) is one of many ways that we strive to deliver the best scholarship to the broadest possible audience. We work with every author to consider whether and how OA might raise a book’s profile, help it to reach the right audience, fulfill the author’s goals, or comply with the requirements of a funder or institution. Throughout this catalog you’ll see books designated with our open access lock logo. These books are all available to read for free online. To learn more about our commitment to open access, visit www.press.umich.edu/openaccess.

Informing a Nation
The Newspaper Presidency of Thomas Jefferson
Mel Laracey

How a dynamic, controversially elected president used the media to promote his image and policies

During his presidency, Thomas Jefferson both sponsored and wrote for his own newspaper, the National Intelligencer and Washington Adviser. Informing a Nation analyzes the paper’s presentation of several critical events to show how Jefferson and his allies dealt with political challenges; reveals previously unexamined aspects of the early presidency; and raises broad questions of the relationship between the presidency and media today.

“With a thorough survey of the scholarly literature on the Jefferson presidency combined with careful analysis of primary newspaper sources from the period, Laracey makes an original and enduring scholarly contribution.”
—Meena Bose, Hofstra University

Mel Laracey is Associate Professor of Political Science at the University of Texas at San Antonio.

Citizenship in the American Republic
Brian L. Fife

Creating a more perfect union, one citizen at a time

Citizenship in the American Republic is based on a fundamental premise that many have contended for the last century—a more informed, participatory citizenry is required for a more effective democratic republic. Fife provides a resource for students in the classroom, as well as for anyone who wants to enhance their capacity to be good citizens in their own democratic system.

“Citizenship in the American Republic provides the essential knowledge a citizen would need to participate effectively in the political system. It also encourages its readers to use this knowledge to be more active and effective participants in politics.”
—Bill Hudson, Providence College

Brian L. Fife is Professor and Chair in the Department of Political Science at Lehigh University.
The Enduring Legacy
Structured Inequality in America’s Public Schools
Mark Ryan

The moral failure of American structured inequality in education

This book, designed for teacher candidates, provides a historical, political, and pedagogical context for the nature of racial segregation, to help future educators better understand their professional responsibility both in the community and in the school, striving for an integrated classroom where all children have a chance to succeed.

“. . . well written, includes well-selected and relevant images, and draws upon up-to-date research on the history of resegregation, tracking, and politics to make a case for explaining the unequal educational system that currently exists.”
—Thomas Fallace, William Paterson University

Mark Ryan is Certified Core Adjunct at Sanford College of Education at the National University.

A Question of Voice
Philosophy and the Search for Legitimacy
Ron Scapp

Philosophy in an age of multiculturalism

A Question of Voice offers a comprehensive consideration of voice as a means of rethinking the history of philosophy. Ron Scapp expands the traditional philosophical discourse about validity, empathy, and solidarity, using the idea of voice to unpack issues of power and legitimacy for individuals and communities. By identifying voice as a significant theme and means by which and through which we might better engage some important philosophical questions, Ron Scapp hopes to expand traditional philosophical discussion and discourse regarding questions about validity, legitimacy, empathy, and solidarity.

Ron Scapp is Professor of Humanities and Teacher Education at the College of Mount Saint Vincent.

More or Less Afraid of Nearly Everything
Homeland Security, Borders, and Disasters in the Twenty-First Century
Ben Rohrbaugh

An insider’s guide to homeland security

More or Less Afraid of Nearly Everything is an accessible and engaging guide to homeland security, particularly issues surrounding migration and border security, making innovative arguments about safety at home in the twentyfirst century and providing practical solutions to real-world problems. shows how foreign policy and diplomacy constitute a truly national story, necessary for understanding the history of the United States.

Ben Rohrbaugh is a Fellow in the Central America and Mexico Policy Initiative at the Robert Strauss Center for International Security and Law at the University of Texas. He is the co-founder of Lantern UAS, which develops systems to scan cargo containers using aerial drones, and a partner at the consulting and training firm BorderWorks Advisors, LLC.

War and Rights
The Impact of War on Political and Civil Rights
David L. Rousseau

Long wars can foster democratic freedom in strong states

In War and Rights, historical case studies demonstrate that in most cases of long-term warfare, leaders must extend economic or political rights in exchange for continued efforts to resolve the crisis, expanding political participation in the long run.

“Rousseau admirably combines various historical and recent case studies, methodological approaches, and types of data to assess the validity and general applicability of this ‘J-curve argument.’”

—Carl Henrik Knutsen, University of Oslo

David L. Rousseau is Associate Professor in the College of Emergency Preparedness, Homeland Security and Cybersecurity at SUNY Albany.
Shaping the Future of Power
Knowledge Production and Network-Building in China-Africa Relations
Lina Benabdallah

Shaping the Future of Power probes the power mechanisms that build, diffuse, and project China’s power in Africa, demonstrating that foreign policy encounters between rising powers and Global South-states do not necessarily exhibit the same logics, behaviors, or investment strategies of Euro-American hegemons. The relational power framework requires these elements to capture both the material aspects and ideational people-centered aspects to power. By examining China’s investments in human resource development programs for Africa, the book reveals a vital, yet undertheorized, aspect of China’s foreign policy making.

Lina Benabdallah is Assistant Professor of Politics and International Affairs at Wake Forest University.

Battle for Allegiance
Governments, Terrorist Groups, and Constituencies in Conflict
Seden Akcinaroglu and Efe Tokdemir

Using a multimethod approach, Seden Akcinaroglu and Efe Tokdemir present the first systematic empirical analysis of the ways in which terrorist groups, the government, and the citizens relate to each other in a triadic web of action.

“Battle for Allegiance moves us beyond our conventional wisdom about how actors try to win the ‘hearts and minds’ of people and speaks to why terrorists govern and when and why terrorist groups and governments choose to invest in civilians.”
—Kathleen Gallagher Cunningham, University of Maryland

Seden Akcinaroglu is Associate Professor of Political Science at Binghamton University. Efe Tokdemir is Assistant Professor of International Relations at Bilkent University.

About Weiser Center for Emerging Democracies Series

The Weiser Center for Emerging Democracies (WCED) Series publishes cutting-edge research in the pivotal field of authoritarianism and democratization studies. We live in a historical moment when democracies seem increasingly fragile and authoritarian regimes seem stubbornly resilient across the globe, and these topics continue to be a central part of research in the social sciences. The WCED Series strives to collect a balance of titles on emerging democracies and enduring dictatorships, as one cannot understand the conditions under which democracies live and thrive without comprehending how they die and remain unborn.

The WCED Series is interested in the full range of research being conducted on authoritarianism and democratization, primarily in political science but at times from history, sociology, and anthropology as well. The series encompasses a global geographic reach. We invite works that are primarily qualitative as well as quantitative in approach, and are interested in edited volumes as well as solo-authored manuscripts.

The series highlights the leading role of the University of Michigan Press, Weiser Center for Emerging Democracies, and International Institute as premier sites for the research and production of knowledge on the conditions that make democracies emerge and dictatorships endure.

About African Perspectives

African Perspectives publishes the highest quality and most innovative research from scholars based in and beyond Africa. We seek exemplary work that unsettles conventions of Africanist scholarship. Our remit spans disciplinary approaches from anthropology to politics to public health, qualitative to quantitative methods, and thematic interests from musicology and literary studies to development and urban planning. The series privileges work grounded in field research in any of the countries of Africa and publishes studies by both well-established and emerging scholars. Monographs that offer imaginative solutions to contemporary social, cultural, technological and environmental problems are especially welcome.

For additional information about the series, please contact Dr. Ellen Bauerle, Executive Editor, University of Michigan Press: bauerle@umich.edu. Queries should be accompanied by a prospectus that contains a current C.V., project description (200 words), table of contents, brief descriptions of chapters (50 words each), estimated length of manuscript in words, estimated date of completion, and indication as to number of images, tables, etc.

About The CAWP Series in Gender and American Politics

The CAWP Series in Gender and American Politics publishes innovative work on gender and politics. We invite manuscripts that push the boundaries of current thinking about the intersection of gender and politics; that demonstrate the centrality of gender to our understanding of American democracy; that are attentive to linkages among theory, empirical analysis, and political practice; and that study under-represented groups and under-researched topics within the field of women and politics. We encourage work that recognizes how other categories of analysis, including race, ethnicity, class, and sexuality, help to constitute and inform gender politics.

The CAWP Series in Gender and American Politics is published by the University of Michigan Press in association with the Center for American Women and Politics (CAWP) at Rutgers University.

The book series Configurations: Critical Studies of World Politics seeks to publish the best social-scientific monographs utilizing a logic of explanation that emphasizes the ways in which causal processes and mechanisms come together in case-specific ways to generate particular empirical outcomes. Regardless of substantive focus, monographs in this series utilize a wide variety of techniques in order to empirically detail the ways that important phenomena operate in world politics broadly understood.

“Broadly understood” means that the series is not substantively limited to what we might call politics in a formal sense (the activities of legislatures, ambassadors, state bureaucracies, or sovereigns), but also encompasses landscapes, artifacts, performances, and encounters that may or may not be explicitly about politics in this formal sense (e.g., airports, advertisements, religious services). The series seeks to develop and demonstrate novel research techniques that will allow scholars to connect these formal and informal realms, and to disclose the political import of a wide panoply of activities—appropriate to an increasingly globalized world.

About Law, Meaning, and Violence

The Law, Meaning, and Violence Series publishes books that explore the way meanings are constructed in laws’ narratives; that measure the connections among those narratives and institutions and practices of law; and that explore the ways those narratives, practices, and institutions embody and give voice to power and violence. While we are interested in books that take existing definitions of law seriously and explore them vigorously, we also invite works that expand and transcend existing definitions by either putting state law in context, by exploring new possibilities for world-creating normative orders, or by examining the law-like elements of social practices.

About Legislative Politics and Policy Making

The Legislative Politics & Policy Making Series at the University of Michigan Press covers both Congress and state legislatures and welcomes both quantitative and qualitative work. It encompasses work on interactions among Congress and other political entities. We are actively seeking political science and legislative politics writers for this series, and would be much obliged to hear about the ideas, projects, and goals of those involved. We look for manuscripts that make an important theoretical contribution, are methodologically rigorous, and address topics of important substantive interest, as well as “insider” books that explore the operation of Congress, an edited volume that provides accessible versions of recent research on Congress and analysis of congressional politics, or cross-over books that address topics such as gender, race, the media, and interest groups and Congress.

Series Editors:
Janet M. Box-Steffensmeier, Ohio State University

Janet M. Box-Steffensmeier has strong interests in legislative politics as well as political behavior and methodology. Her legislative publications include topics of congressional campaign finance, representation and electoral advantage in Congress, legislative success and effectiveness, legislative socialization, position taking, vote choice for members, and congressional politics of the blue slip.

David Canon, University of Wisconsin

David Canon is clearly situated in legislative politics as his primary field. He is perhaps best known for his work on race and representation (which concerned behavior in Congress), but he has also has published work on congressional elections, political careers in Congress, congressional leadership, and the evolution of the legislative committee system. His work includes traditional roll call analysis, analysis of speeches, sponsorship and cosponsorship, committee assignments, and congressional leadership.

NEW AND RECENT BOOKS IN THE SERIES

Minority Party Misery
Political Powerlessness and Electoral Disengagement
Jacob F. H. Smith

Minority Party Misery examines the consequences of the powerlessness that politicians feel from continuously losing battles to the majority party in Congress. Its findings have important consequences for democratic governance, as highly qualified minority party politicians may choose to leave office due to their dismal circumstances rather than continue to serve until their party eventually reenters the majority.

“Smith pulls together a remarkable amount of existing research in building his theory ... this book fills gaps.”
— Thomas Fallace, William Paterson University

Jacob F.H. Smith is Lecturing Fellow in the Thompson Writing Program at Duke University.

About Michigan Studies in International Political Economy

It is widely recognized by social scientists that the relationship between economic and political factors are fundamental influences on international relations. Much of the existing research in the field of international political economy takes up issues including trade and monetary policy, economic sanctions, political conflict, North-South relations, foreign direct investment, and preferential trading arrangements and regional blocs. Michigan Studies in International Political Economy is a series of books that focuses on these and other issues in international political economy.

A growing portion of the work in international political economy employs quantitative and formal methodologies. This series focuses on formal or quantitative work in international political economy. It builds on the University of Michigan’s excellent formal and quantitative work both in political science and international economics. We seek manuscripts that integrate international politics and international economics. We are particularly interested in manuscripts that apply quantitative or formal methodologies to topics of interest to both political scientists and economists.

Complex Systems in the Social and Behavioral Sciences

Theory, Method and Application

Euel Elliott and L. Douglas Kiel, eds.

Complexity Systems in the Social and Behavioral Sciences provides a sophisticated yet accessible account of complexity science or complex systems research that has developed over the last few decades. A wide range of phenomena in the behavioral, social and hard sciences all exhibit certain important similarities consistent with complex adaptive systems. These include the concept of emergence, sensitivity to initial conditions, and interactions between agents in a system that yield unanticipated, nonlinear outcomes. The authors’ contributions range from the implications for artificial intelligence and computing to questions about how to model complex systems through agent-based modeling, to complex phenomena exhibited in international relations, and in organizational behavior. This volume will be an invaluable addition for both the general reader and the specialist, and offer new insights by leading scholars into this fascinating area of research.

Euel Elliott is Professor of Public Policy and Political Economy, and Political Science at University of Texas at Dallas.

L. Douglas Kiel is Professor of Public and Nonprofit Management at University of Texas at Dallas.

Selected by Dr. Elizabeth Demers, University of Michigan Press Editorial Director and Political Science Acquiring Editor, the Press presents an interdisciplinary collection of 25 books that explore the core tensions in American political culture—tensions that erupt every four years during the presidential election. The reading list offers an opportunity for students and others to experience the richest, most comprehensive scholarship available today. Readers will find books that contextualize their own experiences of voting in America, along with big picture analyses of leadership, activism, and international pressures, as well as critiques of the democratic processes that control who gets to sit in the chair, and who gets to pull the lever.
