Acknowledgments

I am grateful to the following people for their contributions to the first edition of this text: John Haugen, Taco Homburg, Devon Woods, and Paula Goodfellow commented on parts of the manuscript and provided insights into testing in general; Karen Adams reviewed the manuscript and suggested important changes and additions; and a number of my students significantly improved the manuscript by asking a lot of questions and offering helpful comments.

For help with the second edition, I especially wish to thank my colleagues at the English Language Institute, University of Michigan, for providing a stimulating and supportive work environment. Thanks in particular to Brenda Imber for keeping me company in the North University Building in the evenings and on weekends. My special thanks to Chris Feak, who has not only inspired me professionally over the years but has also solved my computer problems more times than I can count.

I am indebted to two special people at the University of Michigan Press: Kelly Sippell, for mostly saying yes, and Chris Milton, who, along with Kelly, has worked endless hours on my texts.

Finally, I would like to express my deepest appreciation to Dr. John Bordie of the University of Texas at Austin, who some years ago encouraged my first attempts at materials development. I will always be grateful for his support.
