

Out of the Red

Development and Inequality in the Market Economy

The purpose of this series is to encourage and foster analytical and policy-oriented work on market-based reform in developing and postsocialist countries. Special attention will be devoted in the series to exploring the effects of free market policies on social inequality and sustainable growth and development.

Editor:

Andrés Solimano

Editorial Board:

Alice Amsden

François Bourguignon

William Easterly

Patricio Meller

Vito Tanzi

Lance Taylor

Titles in the Series:

Andrés Solimano, Editor. Road Maps to Prosperity: Essays on Growth and Development

Andrés Solimano, Editor. Social Inequality: Values, Growth, and the State

Lance Taylor, Editor. After Neoliberalism: What Next for Latin America?

Andrés Solimano, Eduardo Aninat, and Nancy Birdsall, Editors.
Distributive Justice and Economic Development: The Case of Chile and Developing Countries

Jaime Ros. Development Theory and the Economics of Growth

Felipe Larraín B., Editor. Capital Flows, Capital Controls, and Currency Crises: Latin America in the 1990s

Mitchell A. Orenstein. Out of the Red: Building Capitalism and Democracy in Postcommunist Europe

Out of the Red

Building Capitalism
and Democracy in Postcommunist Europe

Mitchell A. Orenstein

Ann Arbor

THE UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN PRESS

Copyright © by the University of Michigan 2001
All rights reserved
Published in the United States of America by
The University of Michigan Press
Manufactured in the United States of America
⊗ Printed on acid-free paper

2004 2003 2002 2001 4 3 2 1

No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted in any form
or by any means, electronic, mechanical, or otherwise,
without the written permission of the publisher.

A CIP catalog record for this book is available from the British Library.

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Orenstein, Mitchell A. (Mitchell Alexander)

Out of the red : building capitalism and democracy in postcommunist Europe / Mitchell A. Orenstein.

p. cm.

Includes bibliographical references and index.

ISBN 0-472-09746-6 (cloth : alk. paper) —

ISBN 0-472-06746-X (pbk. : alk. paper)

1. Poland—Economic policy—1990— 2. Czech Republic—
Economic policy. 3. Czechoslovakia—Economic policy—
1945–1992. 4. Poland—Politics and government—1989—
5. Czech Republic—Politics and government—1993—
6. Czechoslovakia—Politics and government—1945–1992.
7. Post-communism—Poland. 8. Post-communism—Czech Republic. 9. Post-communism—Czechoslovakia. I. Title.

HC340.3 .O73 2001

338.947—dc21

00-012902

Grateful acknowledgment is made to Cambridge University Press for permission to reprint figure 1 (from Adam Przeworski,
Democracy and the Market: Political and Economic Reforms in Eastern Europe and Latin America [New York: Cambridge University Press, 1991], fig. 4.1, p. 163. Reprinted with the permission of Cambridge University Press.) and to Albert O.
Hirschman for permission to reprint figure 8 (from Albert O.
Hirschman, A Dissenter's Confession: The Strategy of Economic Development Revisited. In The Strategy of Economic Development
[Boulder, Colo.: Westview Press]. Reprinted with permission.).

For Martine

Contents

List of Figures	ix
List of Tables	xi
Acknowledgments	xiii
Introduction	1
1. Strategies for Transformation	11
2. Poland's Shock Therapy and Beyond	25
3. Czech Social Liberalism and Beyond	61
4. Privatization	96
5. Democratic Policy Alternation	128
Notes	145
References	149
Index	161

Figures

1. Przeworski's model of transition politics	19
2. Strategies for transformation in Poland, 1989–2000	27
3. Government approval ratings in Poland, 1990–93	38
4. The Wałęsa presidency, 1990–95	41
5. Strategies for transformation in the Czech Republic, 1989–2000	65
6. Trust in government in Poland and the Czech Republic since the initiation of economic reform	80
7. Policy constraints and uncertainty in East Central European transitions	133
8. Hirschman's antagonistic growth model	139
9. Policy convergence and learning in East Central European transitions	141

Tables

1. Parties Winning Representation in the Polish Sejm, October 1991	44
2. Economic Indicators for Poland and the Czech Republic, 1989–2001	59
3. Perception of Gain from Voucher Privatization in the Czech Republic	109
4. What Are the Greatest Obstacles to the Privatization of the Polish Economy	123

Acknowledgments

This book represents the culmination of many years of research and writing, during which I enjoyed the assistance of numerous individuals and institutions. Yale University's Center for International and Area Studies (YCIAS) got the project started with a dissertation research grant. I received additional research support in the dissertation phase from the International Research and Exchange Board (IREX), the Institute of International Education (IIE), and the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars. The American Council of Learned Societies–Social Science Research Council (ACLS-SSRC) Joint Committee on Eastern Europe provided funding for language training. I thank all of these institutions for investing in this research.

I owe a great debt to my dissertation adviser, David Cameron, and other faculty in the Departments of Political Science, Sociology and History at Yale University, especially to Ian Shapiro, Sylvia Maxfield, Robert Jenkins, and Piotr Wandycz, for steering me in the right direction at crucial moments and helping me shape the questions addressed in this work. I also cannot imagine having completed this project in the same way without the input, support, and friendship of Yale graduate student colleagues Jonathan Stein and Mark Weiner, who served as great interlocutors and comrades over the years.

Most of the writing, however, took place at institutions other than Yale, and I am much indebted to them as well. The first draft was written in Oxford, while I was a visiting scholar at Nuffield College, and finished in 1996. As time and events moved on in postcommunist Europe, the manuscript required substantial revision. I completed one set of revisions while a postdoctoral fellow of the Thomas J. Watson Jr. Institute for International Studies at Brown University from 1996 to 1998. I began a second set at Harvard University's Center for European Studies in summer 1999 and finally completed the work while an East European Studies Research Fellow at the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars in Washington, D.C., in summer 2000. I owe all three institutions my warmest thanks and appreciation for opening their excellent facilities to me and providing me with wonderful colleagues and many new insights. I also thank my colleagues at the Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs, Syracuse University, for their faith in, and support of, this project. Finally, how could I ever forget the Institute for EastWest Studies, now the EastWest Institute, New York, which provided beautiful offices, great friends and colleagues, and numerous adventures in Prague, Warsaw, and beyond. Thanks also to the American Political Science Association for judging "Out of the Red" the best doctoral dissertation in comparative politics in 1997 and the winner of that year's Gabriel A. Almond Award. And thanks to Ellen McCarthy of the University of Michigan Press for her trust and for stewarding the manuscript to publication.

I feel greatly indebted to the numerous friends and scholars who have taken a significant amount of time to read earlier drafts and sections of this manuscript and discuss the core issues with me. Although I will inevitably fail to name everyone, I would like especially to thank Robert Anderson, Hilary Appel, Karla Brom, Włodzimierz Brus, Ingrid Buxell, Michael Cain, John Campbell, Ellen Comisso, Linda J. Cook, Stephen Crowley, Jean de Fougerolles, John Gould, Carol Graham, Anna Grzymala-Busse, Jerzy Hausner, Stephen Heintz, Joel Hellman, Kristin Hohenadel, Robert Jenkins, Daniel Jowell, Tadeusz Kowalik, Gerald McDermott, Robert Mickey, Joel Migdal, Kálmán Mizsei, Witold Morawski, Krzysztof Ners, Joan Nelson, David Ost, Martin Potůček, Dietrich Rueschemeyer, Marilyn Rueschemeyer, Andrzej Rudka, Peter Rutland, Andy Schwartz, Marc Skapof, Joel Turkewitz, Andrzej Tymowski, Milada Vachudova, Jiří Večerník, Kieran Williams, Rick Woodward, and Alan Zuckerman. John Birkelund, chairman of the board of the Watson Institute, deserves special mention for both pinpointing errors in an earlier version and appreciating the finer qualities of the manuscript at the same time.

Special thanks go to Alexander Russo, who provided invaluable research assistance in the final stages of manuscript preparation, to Rita Mesias for her work on chapter 4 and to Ilean Cashu, for his help with the references. I am also indebted to the many government officials, scholars, trade unionists, and enterprise managers in East Central Europe who agreed to be interviewed for this project and supplied me with a mountain of research materials and insights. I hope that the publication of this book goes some of the way toward repaying the debt I have incurred to them.

Finally, my deepest appreciation goes to Martine Haas, who offered valuable insights and lived through the highs and lows of this project with great charm and enthusiasm. And to my parents, Phil and Joyce Orenstein, who educated and inspired me through their example of hard work and artistic dedication. It is to them and their parents and grandparents, who came from Central and Eastern Europe under often very difficult conditions, that I owe my fascination with and concern for the politics of the region.