

Acknowledgments

This book would have been a passing thought without the generosity of our friends and mentors: Professor Ramsay Liem, Sophia Lai, Jennie Lin, Eric Liu, and Robin Tsai refined and enriched our introduction with their sharp wisdom. Jason Schwartz deserves special mention for his helpful edits and inspirational ideas. We are also grateful to Vickie Nam and Ruben Navarrette for their advice and support from the beginning of this project; Yumi Kim for her letter-writing skills; and the numerous scholars—including Dean John Cawthorne and Professors Patrick Byrne, Eileen Chow, John Holdren, Belle Liang, Larry Ludlow, Marina McCoy, and Bill Torbert—who helped us refine our vision for this book and successfully navigate the publishing world. For their assistance with writer recruitment, their thoughtful questions, and especially their infectious enthusiasm for this project, we are indebted to many friends—Jonathan Amar, Ryan Auer, Megan Bensley, Doug Campbell, Jumi Cha, Monica Chandra, David Chen, Carol Choi, Jaime DesJardins, Jonathan Evans, Nancy Garland, Lauren Goslin, Roger Hong, Jenny Huang, Victor Huang, Megumi Itoh, Stefan Jacob, Amie Kim, Yoon Jung Lee, Stephanie Lim, Jennifer Lo, Kenneth Mah, Deborah Mascalzoni, Nitin Nohria, Xaq Pitkow, Ellen Rubinstein, Martin Sandbu, Mark Seto, Clara Shen, Grace Simmons, Tacara Soones, Irene Sun, Shauyi Tai, Cindy Uh, Stephanie Valencia, David Xiao, Mary Yang, Jia Jia Ye, and Ethan Yeh—who have made this project as much theirs as it is ours. For introducing us to the power of self-reflection through writing and guiding us toward our own style and voice, we thank our high school English teachers, especially Megan Birdsong, Robert Javier, Amy Moore, Shozo Shimazaki, and Debbie Vanni. We would also like to thank our families for their unconditional support and our siblings in particular—Susie for her administrative expertise and Jerry for his sense of humor. Finally, for taking a chance on two college kids, sharing our vision for this book, and making its publication possible, we thank Ellen McCarthy, Kelly O'Connor, and Ann Marie Schultz from the University of Michigan Press. We owe the successes in this work to all our friends and mentors; any shortcomings are wholly our own.