Acknowledgments

Grateful acknowledgement is given to Comparative Studies in Society and History (CSSH) for permission to reproduce the following articles in revised form:

“Flowers and Bones: Approaches to the Dead in Anglo-American and Italian Cemeteries” by Jack Goody and Cesare Poppi originally appeared in CSSH 36: 146–75.

“Race, Ethnicity, Species, and Breed: Totemism and Horse-Breed Classification in America” by John Borneman originally appeared in CSSH 30: 25–51.

We also thank the American Historical Association for permission to republish “The Case for Comparing Histories” by Raymond Grew, which originally appeared in American Historical Review 85: 763–78.