

Acknowledgments

This book began as a spirited email exchange with Mike Munger and Mike Ensley at Duke University concerning the 2000 presidential election. I would like to thank Bernard Grofman, Donald Saari, Russell Dalton, Duncan Luce, and William Batchelder at the University of California, Irvine for their support and encouragement, and also the Institute for Mathematical Behavioral Science and the Center for the Study of Democracy. I would also particularly like to thank Nicholas Miller for his support and advice over the years. I am grateful to my co-author, Eliora van der Hout, whose work on electoral systems was vital to the conclusions of chapter 3. Chapter 5 draws heavily on my article “The Tyranny of the Supermajority,” Journal of Theoretical Politics 16, no. 1: 53–77, © Sage Publications, Ltd., London, Thousand Oaks, and New Delhi, 2004, and is used here by permission.

I would like to thank my teachers, particularly Herbert Kitschelt, Hervé Moulin, John Brehm, Emerson Niu, John Aldrich, Romand Coles, Michael Gillespie, David Soskice, and Iain McLean. I would like to thank various colleagues at UCI and elsewhere for their helpful suggestions and conversations, and others for providing encouragement to finish this book. The list includes but is not limited to James Adams, Shaun Bowler, Carter Butts, Linda Cohen, Amihai Glazer, Marek Kaminski, Kamal Sadiq, Wayne Sandholtz, Brian Skyrms, and Rein Taagepera. I would also like to thank various graduate students who participated in the classes and seminars in which some of this material was developed, notably Michael Latner, Bruce Hemmer, Michael Jensen, John Ensich, and Steven Weldon. Finally I would like to thank Karen, Margaret, and Madeleine for being there or not being there, as appropriate.
