This project has benefited tremendously from the support of Barbara Harlow, Elizabeth Richmond-Garza, and W. B. Worthen. Their critical input, generosity with time, and confidence in my work has been a constant source of encouragement. I would also like to thank Anne Cvetkovich, Herman van Olphen, and Timothy Brennan for reading and commenting on earlier versions. Their interest has meant a lot. Parts of this book have also been researched and written with the aid of a University of Texas Continuing Fellowship, a University of Western Ontario Vice-President's grant, and a Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council grant. I am grateful for such support. I owe special thanks to friends and colleagues at the University of Texas at Austin for their engagement with my work and, in some cases, their involvement in it after we graduated: Katie Kane, Karen Steele, Shoba Vasudevan, Zjaleh Hajibashi, Salah Hassan, Fran Buntman, Esi Dogbe, Purnima Bose, and Laura Lyons. Shoba's and Katie's friendship and willingness to engage in endless discussions and conversations were always enriching and inspiring. And I owe special thanks to Esi for devoting some of her very precious time to read and comment on parts of the book. For her friendship and continual support since Panjab University, I am very thankful to Prabhjot Parmar. Dr. Rama Aga's interest in my personal and professional well-being since class 10 continues to be a source of inspiration.

I would also like to thank my colleagues at the University of Western Ontario for their support and encouragement. Others who have contributed to discussions and helped locate relevant materials include Kamna Sharma, Tarun Tejpal, Indira Gupta, Lata Singh, Indira Gupta, Rajen Prasad and Madhu Prasad at SAHMAT (Safdar Hashmi Memorial Trust), Henri Boyi, Raja Seera, Rajesh Gulati, Teresa Hubel, Sarah Green and Katy Arens. Special thanks are due to them. I really appreciate research assistance from Deepa Parakh, Margaret Toye, and Ruchika Arora. My gratitude goes to Lisa

Acknowledgments

Lloyd and David Lloyd for the opportunity to present my chapter on the Indian People's Theatre at the "Other Circuits" colloquium at the University of California, Irvine, and also for their detailed response to the essay. The colloquium afforded me the opportunity to meet and discuss my work with engaging critics whose comments were most helpful. I would also like to thank the "Other Circuits" participants, in particular Dipesh Chakravorty and Pragna Patel, for raising important questions. The detailed, insightful, and generous comments made by two anonymous reviewers were very inspiring and useful for the final shape of this book. Thanks also to LeAnn Fields at the University of Michigan Press for being extremely supportive of the project and to Marcia LaBrenz and Allison Liefer for their help.

I have benefited tremendously from the support of many libraries. The staff at the Perry Castenada Library at the University of Texas at Austin was very resourceful in procuring materials otherwise difficult to locate. In particular, material from the India Office Library, London, allowed me to locate important sources on indigo plantations. The Harry Ransom Center at the University of Texas was a great resource for materials on the Indian People's Theatre. Libraries at Michigan State University, the University of Western Ontario, and Temple University have also been useful. The staff at the National Archives of India in Delhi and the Nehru Memorial library was very generous with help in locating materials.

Finally, I wish to thank my families—Bhatias and Aulakhs—for their constant support, for their generosity during my research trips to India, and for passing on relevant information. My sister, Ruby, took tremendous interest, always asking questions and saving important source material. Her concern and friendship made a huge difference, as did Bony's and Neetu's interest in my work. My most heartfelt thanks go to Preet Aulakh, my partner and best friend, for his sustained involvement at every stage of the project. This book is for my parents, Shyama Bhatia and Harbans Singh Bhatia, and for Preet, whose unfailing interest, discussions, insights, compassion, and companionship enabled its successful completion.

I gratefully acknowledge the following for permission to reprint, as parts of the book, the following articles: Duke University Press for "Staging Resistance: The Indian People's Theatre Association," which appeared in Lisa Lowe and David Lloyd's edited book, The Politics of Culture in the Shadow of Capital (1997), 432–60; Johns Hopkins University Press for "Staging the 1857 Mutiny as the 'Great Rebellion': Colonial History and Post-colonial Interventions in Utpal Dutt's Mahavidroh," Theatre Journal, 51, no. 2 (1999): 167–84; and Alif: Journal of Comparative Poetics for granting permission to reprint, as a section of chapter 3, "'Shakespeare' and the Codes of Empire in India," Alif, 18 (1998): 96–126.
