

Ethnic Drag

Social History, Popular Culture, and Politics in Germany Geoff Eley, Series Editor

Ethnic Drag: Performing Race, Nation, Sexuality in West Germany, Katrin Sieg

Projecting History: German Nonfiction Cinema, 1967–2000, Nora M. Alter

Cities, Sin, and Social Reform in Imperial Germany, Andrew Lees

The Challenge of Modernity: German Social and Cultural Studies, 1890–1960,
Adelheid von Saldern

Exclusionary Violence: Antisemitic Riots in Modern German History,
Christhard Hoffmann, Werner Bergmann, and Helmut Walser Smith, editors

Languages of Labor and Gender: Female Factory Work in Germany, 1850–1914,
Kathleen Canning

That Was the Wild East: Film Culture, Unification and the “New” Germany, Leonie Naughton

Anna Seghers: The Mythic Dimension, Helen Fehervary

*Staging Philanthropy: Patriotic Women and the National Imagination in Dynastic
Germany, 1813–1916*, Jean H. Quataert

Truth to Tell: German Women’s Autobiographies and Turn-of-the-Century Culture, Katharina Gerstenberger

The “Goldhagen Effect”: History, Memory, Nazism—Facing the German Past, Geoff Eley, editor

Shifting Memories: The Nazi Past in the New Germany, Klaus Neumann

Saxony in German History: Culture, Society, and Politics, 1830–1933,
James Retallack, editor

Little Tools of Knowledge: Historical Essays on Academic and Bureaucratic Practices, Peter Becker and William Clark, editors

Public Spheres, Public Mores, and Democracy: Hamburg and Stockholm, 1870–1914, Madeleine Hurd

Making Security Social: Disability, Insurance, and the Birth of the Social Entitlement State in Germany, Greg Eghigian

The German Problem Transformed: Institutions, Politics, and Foreign Policy, 1945–1995, Thomas Banchoff

Building the East German Myth: Historical Mythology and Youth Propaganda in the German Democratic Republic, 1945–1989, Alan L. Nothnagle

Mobility and Modernity: Migration in Germany, 1820–1989, Steve Hochstadt

Triumph of the Fatherland: German Unification and the Marginalization of Women,
Brigitte Young

Framed Visions: Popular Culture, Americanization, and the Contemporary German and Austrian Imagination, Gerd Gemünden

The Imperialist Imagination: German Colonialism and Its Legacy,
Sara Friedrichsmeyer, Sara Lennox, and Susanne Zantop, editors

(continued on last page)

Ethnic Drag

*Performing Race, Nation,
Sexuality in West Germany*

KATRIN SIEG

Ann Arbor

THE UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN PRESS

Copyright © by the University of Michigan 2002
All rights reserved
Published in the United States of America by
The University of Michigan Press
Manufactured in the United States of America
⊗ Printed on acid-free paper

2005 2004 2003 2002 4 3 2 1

No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, or otherwise, without the written permission of the publisher.

A CIP catalog record for this book is available from the British Library.

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Sieg, Katrin, 1961–

Ethnic drag : performing race, nation, sexuality in West Germany /
Katrin Sieg.

p. cm. — (Social history, popular culture, and politics in Germany)

Includes bibliographical references and index.

ISBN 0-472-11282-1 (cloth : alk. paper)

1. Race awareness in art. 2. Race in literature. 3. Arts,
German—Germany (West)—20th century. I. Title. II. Series.

NX650.R34 S54 2002

791'.086'930943—dc21

2001008274

Contents

Acknowledgments	vii
Introduction	1
1. A Prehistory: Jewish Impersonation	29
2. Race and Reconstruction: Winnetou in Bad Segeberg	73
3. Winnetou's Grandchildren: Indian Identification, Ethnic Expertise, White Embodiment	115
4. The Violent White Gaze: Drag and the Critique of Fascism	151
5. Queer Colonialism: Ethnographic Authority and Homosexual Desire	187
6. Ethnic Travesties	221
Conclusion	255
References	261
Index	281

Acknowledgments

I would like to thank the many friends and colleagues as well as institutions who made the writing of this book not only possible but thoroughly enjoyable. Through them, I found great intellectual pleasure and sociability while researching, thinking, and talking through this project. Each chapter carries for me memories of conversations at the kitchen table, in Berlin garden bistros, or during long car rides with friends and lovers in San Diego, Bloomington, and Northampton. My friend Merrill Morris was there for rescue sessions with my new computer and offered sustenance with vegetarian food, good wine, Xena tapes, excellent conversation, and an evil wit. Leslie Adelson and Susanne Zantop have been models for my own intellectual and political aspirations as a feminist academic, and I am deeply grateful for their probing questions and apt comments about my work. Susan Cocalis, Sara Lennox, and Katharina Gerstenberger were wonderful, vivacious, and encouraging interlocutors during our summer of writing together in Northampton—the same goes for Nele Hempel and Elisabeth Krimmer. Sue-Ellen Case has taught me how to read performance, and drag, as a feminist. The Women in German network has provided a stimulating environment in which to grapple with new ideas as well as poke cruel fun at them. Robyn Wiegman's work on whiteness and masculinity early on pushed my thinking in new directions, and I miss her brilliance and warmth in my daily life. Mitchell Morris's ideas about Wagner's gay reception inspired my own thoughts about May's queer heroes and iconography. I hope Angelika Czekay will forgive me for stomping on Winnetou. Amy Robinson's ideas on passing and drag are woven through this book. I thank my colleague in the Germanic Studies department at Indiana University, Ingeborg Hoesterey, for her generosity, good company, stimulating criticism, and valuable advice. My friends in Berlin, Karin Uecker, Anne Schoefer, and Barbara Scheel, avid theatergoers and intrepid critics all, were cherished sparring partners as well as great sources of comfort and nightlong conversations on the Ufer in Kreuzberg. My family was perpetually amused by the concept of Ethnomaskerade, and I thank them for clippings, tips, their hospitality, as well as material and psychological support. My deepest, most heartfelt thanks go to Susan Cocalis, an elegant cross-dresser in her own right and the companion of my ethnographic ventures to the Villa Bärenfett and elsewhere. I have greatly benefited from her careful reading of most of the drafts, her probing questions, and her patience overall.

I want to express my gratitude to those individuals who were generous enough to share their views and experience as Indian hobbyists or critics of hobbyism with me. Research on this project was supported by an National Endowment for the Humanities summer grant in 1998, as well as the Overseas Studies Office at Indiana University, which financed a one-month stay in Hamburg in 1999. I also wish to acknowledge the Research and the University Graduate School office on campus for their summer support in 1998 and 2001. A number of individuals and institutions have made it possible for me to present my research to perceptive and critical audiences, and I wish to thank Leslie Adelson and Peter-Uwe Hohendahl for inviting me to the Symposium on German Post-colonial Theory held at Cornell in 1997; Jeannette Clausen, who gave me the opportunity to present my research at Indiana University–Purdue University at Fort Wayne; to Sara Friedrichsmeyer, who invited me to the University of Cincinnati to speak about Karl May; to Dagmar von Hoff, who sponsored my lecture at the Universität Hamburg about ethnic drag; and to Susanne Zantop, one of the organizers of the Deutsche and Indianer conference in Dartmouth in 1999. Susanne was killed in January 2001, together with her husband Half. I fondly remember and greatly miss her kindness and her wisdom.

Chapter 3 has been previously published as “Indian Impersonation as Historical Surrogation,” Germans and Indians: Fantasies, Encounters, Projections, ed. Colin Calloway, Gert Gemünden, and Susanne Zantop (Lincoln: University of Nebraska Press, 2002). Permission to reprint has been granted by University of Nebraska Press.

I first formulated some of the ideas in this study in the article “Ethnic Drag and National Identity: Multicultural Crises, Crossings, and Interventions,” which appeared in The Imperialist Imagination, ed. Sara Friedrichsmeyer, Sara Lennox, and Susanne Zantop (Ann Arbor: University of Michigan Press, 1998).