

Communities and Law

Law, Meaning, and Violence

The scope of Law, Meaning, and Violence is defined by the wide-ranging scholarly debates signaled by each of the words in the title. Those debates have taken place among and between lawyers, anthropologists, political theorists, sociologists, and historians, as well as literary and cultural critics. This series is intended to recognize the importance of such ongoing conversations about law, meaning, and violence as well as to encourage and further them.

Acknowledgments

Most of this book was written during my sabbatical in the Center for the Study of Law and Society at the University of California, Berkeley, in 1999 following a period of field research. I acknowledge Malcolm Feeley and Robert Kagan for their hospitality and their remarks on the book. Austin Sarat enthusiastically made significant and insightful suggestions for revisions and improvements. The series editors, Martha Minow and Austin Sarat, prevented me from making several mistakes. The acquisitions editor, Jeremy Shine, guided me faithfully, efficiently, and competently during the publishing process. I am very thankful for the very efficient and prudent work of Kevin M. Rennells, the copyediting coordinator, and for Sarah Mann, Pete Sickman-Garner, and all the excellent staff of the University of Michigan Press. Joel Migdal made helpful comments on the project. William Twining, Laura Edelman, Lee Epstein, Prina Lahav, Stuart Scheingold, Alan Dowty, Shai Lavy, Ronen Shamir, Menachem Mautner, Garry Jacobson, Avi Shlaim, Menachem Hofnung, Yoav Dotan, Ruth Gavison, David Kretzmer, Ron and Keren Shapiro, Gidi Sapir, and Azar Gat made helpful remarks. Michael McCann provided references to literature and comments on legal mobilization. I thank them all. I thank Ravit Hananel for the index. The responsibility is all mine.
