

Contents

	Introduction: Microeconomic Time	1
1	Rethinking Economic Behavior	6
	Economics, Microeconomics, and Ideology	6
	A Socially Fabricated Work Force: Implications	7
	Bringing Time into Microeconomics: Alternate Approaches	10
	Introducing Positive Time	13
	What Is the Relationship between the Two Microeconomics?	18
	Ideal Types and Conundrums	19
	A Further Conundrum	21
	What Is Lost in a Micro That Encompasses Real Time?	22
	Free Markets and Free Society?	23
2	What Is a “Commodity”?	26
	Microeconomics and Commodity Form	26
	Commodity Form	28
	Value Forms in the Sphere of Exchange	29
	Aristotelian Marxism	31
	The Second, Third, and Fourth Dimensions of the Commodity Form	36
	The Victorian Adolescence of Capitalism	39
	A Note on Terminology	40
3	On the Social Relations of Distribution and Consumption	42
	Social Relations of Consumption I: Administrative Relations	43
	Social Relations of Consumption II: The Sale/Purchase State	45
	Further Observations on Modern Sale/Purchase	47
	“Engineered” Markets and Commodity Form	52
	“Final” Consumption as Productive	57
4	Critical Commodity Theory	62
	“Quasi Service” as Analytical Element	62
	A Historical-Materialist Account	66

	Implications for the Theory of Property	70
	Commodity Fetishism and “False Experience”	74
5	The Commodity Form of Labor-Power	79
	The Concept of the Social Labor-Power	79
	Rethinking “the Labor Force”	80
	Labor and Labor-Power	82
	The Social Labor-Power	86
	Courses/Channels and the Commodity Form of Labor-Power	87
	Modal Courses	91
	The Higher Courses	92
	The “Worker” Courses	95
	A Note on the Other Courses	97
	Course, Commodity, and Conditions of Employment	98
6	Producing the Social Labor-Power	104
	Human Capital Revisited	104
	To (Re)produce Labor-Power	106
	Varieties of Constrained Consumption	107
	Mentors and Learners	114
	Labor-Power as Commodity	117
7	Price and Value	119
	The Value Subsystem	119
	Rejecting the Subsystem	121
	The Troubling Status of Value	125
	Reformulating Value Theory	128
	Naturally and Socially Imposed Constraints	132
	Value Expanded	137
8	Amplifying, Confirming, and Proposing	141
	The Cost of Change	141
	The Courses as Functional Units of Capital	142
	The Altered Role of Money	145
	The Money Form of Value Superseded	147
	What Is Capital?	150
	How Should We Evaluate Capital’s Performance?	155
	On the Tension between Prices and Values	158
	Notes	161
	Bibliography	203
	Index	209