

Contributors

JAMES M. AVERY is a doctoral candidate in the Department of Political Science at the University of Kentucky. His primary interests are in political behavior, the media, and race.

MICHAEL K. BROWN is Professor of Politics at the University of California at Santa Cruz, where he has taught since 1982. He is the author of Race, Money, and the American Welfare State (1999) and Working the Street: Police Discretion and the Dilemmas of Reform (1988). He also edited and contributed to Remaking the Welfare State: Retrenchment and Social Policy in America and Europe (1988). He is coauthor of Whitewashing Race: Color-Blind Policies in a Color-Conscious America (forthcoming).

RICHARD C. FORDING is Associate Professor of Political Science at the University of Kentucky. His primary teaching and research interests include public policy (welfare, criminal justice), state politics, social movements, West European politics, and quantitative methodology. He is the author or coauthor of articles appearing in American Political Science Review, American Journal of Political Science, Journal of Politics, Social Science Quarterly, Comparative Political Studies, Political Behavior, and European Journal of Political Research.

MARTIN GILENS is Associate Professor of Political Science and Associate Director of the Institute for Social Science Research at UCLA. He is the author of Why Americans Hate Welfare: Race, Media, and the Politics of Antipoverty Policy (1999). He has also published research on media, race, gender, and welfare politics in the American Political Science Review, American Journal of Political Science, Journal of Politics, British Journal of Political Science, Public Opinion Quarterly, and Berkeley Journal of Sociology. He holds a Ph.D. in sociology from the University of California Berkeley and taught at Yale University before joining the faculty at UCLA. His research has been supported by grants from the National Science Foundation and the Social Science Research Council.

SUSAN TINSLEY GOODEN is Associate Professor in the Center for Public Administration and Policy (CPAP) and Director of the Race and Social Policy Research

Contributors

Center at Virginia Tech. She conducts research in the area of welfare policy with an emphasis on race and welfare; private and non-profit service delivery; and rural welfare policy. Also, she is a consultant to the Manpower Demonstration Research Corporation (MDRC), a non-profit, employment and training research firm based in New York, New York. She is the author or coauthor of articles appearing in the Public Administration Review, Harvard Journal of African American Public Policy, Journal of Public Management and Social Policy, Review of Public Personnel Administration, and other journals.

RODNEY E. HERO is Packey J. Dee Professor of American Democracy in the Department of Political Science at the University of Notre Dame. His research and teaching interests are in U.S. democracy and governance, particularly as understood through the analytical lenses of ethnic/racial politics and state-local government/federalism. His major publications include Faces of Inequality: Social Diversity in American Politics (1998), and Latinos and the U.S. Political System: Two-Tiered Pluralism (1992).

MARTIN JOHNSON is Assistant Professor of Political Science, University of California, Riverside. His interests focus on the influence of social context on public opinion, voting behavior, and public policy. He is author or coauthor of articles appearing in American Journal of Political Science, Electoral Studies and State Politics and Policy Quarterly. His research on state public opinion has received awards from the National Opinion Research Center and the State Politics and Policy Section of the American Political Science Association.

ROBERT C. LIEBERMAN is Associate Professor of Political Science and Public Affairs at Columbia University. He is the author of Shifting the Color Line: Race and the American Welfare State (1998), which won several major book awards, as well as numerous articles about race, welfare policy, and political institutions.

ERIN O'BRIEN is a doctoral candidate in the Department of Government in the School of Public Affairs at American University. She is the coauthor of research appearing in American Journal of Political Science.

MARK PEFFLEY is Professor of Political Science at the University of Kentucky. His primary teaching and research interests have focused on public opinion, the mass media, and electoral behavior. His research has appeared in American Political Science Review, American Journal of Political Science, Journal of Politics, International Studies Quarterly, American Politics Quarterly, Political Behavior, Political Communications, and Political Research Quarterly. He is also coeditor (with Jon Hurwitz) of Perception and Prejudice: Race and Politics in the U.S. (1998).

FRANCES FOX PIVEN is Distinguished University Professor at the Graduate School and University Center of the City University of New York. Her many books written with Richard Cloward include Why Americans Still Don't Vote (2000), The Breaking of the American Social Compact (1997), Regulating the Poor (updated 1993), The New Class War (1986), and Poor People's Movements (1977).

SANFORD F. SCHRAM teaches social theory and policy in the Graduate School of Social Work and Social Research at Bryn Mawr College. He is the author of Praxis for the Poor: Piven and Cloward and the Future of Social Science in Social Welfare (2002), After Welfare: The Culture of Postindustrial Social Policy (2000) and Words of Welfare: The Poverty of Social Science and the Social Science of Poverty (1995) which won the Michael Harrington Award from the American Political Science Association. He has also coedited, with Samuel Beer, Welfare Reform: A Race to the Bottom? (1999).

JOE SOSS is Associate Professor of Government in the School of Public Affairs at American University. He is the author of Unwanted Claims: The Politics of Participation in the U.S. Welfare System (2000). He is the author or coauthor of articles appearing in American Political Science Review, American Journal of Political Science, Political Research Quarterly, Politics & Society, Administration & Society, Publius, American Journal of Sociology & Social Welfare, Political Communication, and Public Opinion Quarterly.

HOLLOWAY SPARKS is Assistant Professor of Political Science at Pennsylvania State University. Her research has appeared in Hypatia: A Journal of Feminist Philosophy and has been supported by a grant from the Center for American Women and Politics at Rutgers University. She is currently completing a manuscript on the dissident citizenship of women activists in the civil rights and welfare rights movements.

GERTRUDE A. STEUERNAGEL is Professor of Political Science at Kent State University. She is co-author of Women and Political Participation: Cultural Change in the Political Arena (1997) and Women and Public Policy: A Revolution in Progress (2d ed, 1999).

CAROLINE J. TOLBERT is Assistant Professor of Political Science and Public Policy at Kent State University. She is coeditor of Citizens as Legislators: Direct Democracy in the United States (1998) and author of three chapters in that volume. She is author or coauthor of articles appearing in the American Journal of Political Science, Journal of Politics, Comparative Political Studies, Women and Politics, Political Research Quarterly, American Politics Research, and Political Science Quarterly. She is coauthor of the forthcoming book Beyond the Digital Divide.

THOMAS P. VARTANIAN is Associate Professor in the Graduate School of Social Work and Social Research at Bryn Mawr College. He has published numerous articles on poverty and welfare in the Social Service Review, the Journal of Marriage and the Family, and other journals. He is currently conducting studies on the long-term effects of food and nutrition programs and the delinking of Medicaid and food stamps from cash assistance.