

Acknowledgments

I HAVE INCURRED MANY DEBTS while researching and writing this book. I wish to thank Brown University for providing essential logistical support: research funds from the Office of the Vice-President for Research, a faculty fellowship from the Cogut Center for the Humanities, and sabbatical leaves from the Office of the Dean of the Faculty. My colleagues and students in the Department of French Studies at Brown University deserve my deepest gratitude for creating a congenial and stimulating environment in which to teach and to conduct research. At the University of Michigan Press, my sincerest thanks go to Alexa Ducsay, Marcia LaBrenz, and Alison Mackeen for their cheerful responses to my many queries and their expert handling of the manuscript.

This book would never have been completed without the advice and encouragement of many people, including Réda Bensmaïa, Michel-André Bossy, Dominique Coulombe, Erika Gaffney, Ben Labonte, Charley Labonte, Stephanie Merrim, Gretchen Schultz, Domna Stanton, Catherine Velay-Vallantin, and Abby Zanger. My warm thanks to Faith Beasley, Beth Goldsmith, Michèle Longino, Jeffrey Merrick, Jeff Peters, and Pierre Saint-Amand for reading and commenting on portions of the manuscript. With her usual warmth and generosity, Virginia Krause provided invaluable advice all along the way. Todd Reeser, my collaborator in French masculinity studies, helped to give conceptual shape to this book in more ways than he may realize. Many years ago, as an undergraduate, Rebecca Wilkin assisted me in compiling an initial bibliography on masculinity; more recently, as a colleague, she gave me many insightful suggestions for this project and helped me arrive at the title. Last but certainly not least, this book owes its greatest debt to Catherine Gordon-Seifert, whose passion for seventeenth-century France and whose uncommon love fill my life with joy. All of the aforementioned individuals have made this book much better than it would have been without their help. But the weaknesses that remain are obviously my own.

Portions of chapter 5 appeared in slightly different form as “Masculinity and Satires of ‘Sodomites’ in France, 1660–1715,” in Homosexuality in French

Acknowledgments

History and Culture, ed. Jeffrey Merrick and Michael Sibalís (Binghampton: Harrington Park Press, 2001), 37–52, and “Boisrobert’s Cabinet and the Seventeenth-Century Closet,” in Intersections, Biblio 17, no. 161 (Tübingen: Gunter Narr Verlag, 2005), 261–70. I am grateful to the Hayworth Press/Taylor & Francis and to Narr, Francke, Attempto Verlag, respectively, for kind permission to reproduce this material. I would also like to thank the John Hay Library at Brown University for photographing and granting permission to reproduce the “Carte de Tendre,” and the Bibliothèque Nationale de France for permission to reproduce the engraving Un Homme marchand de face.