

Contents

Introduction 1

Part One. The Six Building Blocks

1. Find Literature That Compels You and Define Its Theme 17
 - Ways to Think about Choosing Material*
 - Discovering Your Theme*
 - Naming Your Theme*
 - Considering Your Landscape and Neighborhood*
 - How I Choose Material to Adapt*
 - Construction Exercises for Building Block 1*
2. Select Dialogue and Narrative 35
 - Theater's Advantage: Seeing Each Character's Point of View*
 - Creative Partnership: Reassigning Dialogue to Different Points of View*
 - Dialogue: The Building Block of Playwrights*
 - Narrative: Pacing Your Build*
 - How to Handle Different Kinds of Narration*
 - Research on Language*
 - Construction Exercises for Building Block 2*
3. Identify Principal Characters and Primary Relationships 60
 - Choosing Which Characters Your Adaptation Will Enact*
 - Know Your Characters Intimately*
 - Actors' Skill at Playing Multiple Roles*
 - Letting Actors Shape Your Vision*
 - Relationship: The Mortar That Holds Characters Together*
 - Family: The Blueprint for Understanding Relationship*
 - Construction Exercises for Building Block 3*

x Contents

4. Choose an Evocative Stageable Image 75

Finding the Theatrical Environment

Contemporary Staging: Spatial Metaphors as Viable Playing Spaces

Evocative Details: Parts Suggest the Whole

Imagining Onstage: Setting the Scene with What's Necessary

and Evocative

Creative Spaces

Choosing and Integrating an Evocative Stageable Image

Using Narration from a Character's Point of View to Establish Place

How Scale of Venue Changes the Focus

Construction Exercises for Building Block 4

5. Construct the Storyline 90

Building a Storyline on Your Foundational Theme

Conflict: Tensions between Characters That Add Heat and Light

Finding the Central Event

Prior Circumstances: The Past That Shapes the Future

The Beginning, Middle, and End of a Clear Storyline

Construction Exercises for Building Block 5

6. Craft Playable Actions 105

Language as Action

Image as Action

Physical Action as a Direct Theatrical Vocabulary

Effective Stage Directions for Essential Actions

Offering Suggestive Clues in Stage Directions

Construction Exercises for Building Block 6

Part Two: Sturdy Construction: Yours, Mine, & Master Adaptors

7. Balancing the Blocks 123

What Is Your Significant Content Element?

What Anchors Your Adaptation?

What Performance Vocabulary Best Serves Your Story?

Trust Your Hunches

Balancing the Elements

Two Case Studies

Clarifying the Where and When

Tracking Time and Place

Utilizing Your Best Materials and Tools as You Define Shifts

Aspirations for the Next Stage

Construction Exercises for Balancing the Blocks

8. Two Case Studies: Enough and Me and My Shadow 144
The First Enough—Boston, 1979–80: Reality Theater
Casting, Producing, and Permission
The Six Building Blocks for the First Enough
Second Enough—Boston, 1984: Theater Works
The Six Building Blocks for the Second Enough
Third Enough—Atlanta and the Netherlands, 1991: Theater Emory
The Six Building Blocks for the Third Enough
“Petition”/Me and My Shadow—Boston, 1982
Speaking the Speech, and to Whom
Clues to Finding the Evocative Stageable Image
Staying Open to Finding Collaborators
The Six Building Blocks for “Petition”/Me and My Shadow
9. Partnership and Performance 160
Building Collaborative Relationships
The Workshop Process
The Auteur Model of the Adaptor-Director
Challenges That Multitasking Adaptors Face
Some Auteurs and the Theater Companies That Have Kept Them
Models of Collaboration
Playwriting Centers
Establishing a Collaborative Relationship with a Theater
A Way to Start: The Readers’ Theater Model
- Appendix: Adaptations by Vincent Murphy 177
- Bibliography 179
- Index 181