

Make Us Wave Back: Essays on Poetry and Influence
Michael Collier
<http://www.press.umich.edu/titleDetailDesc.do?id=192116>
The University of Michigan Press

Make Us Wave Back

WRITERS ON WRITING

Jay Parini, Series Editor

A good writer is first a good reader. Looking at craft from the inside, with an intimate knowledge of its range and possibilities, writers also make some of our most insightful critics. With this series we will bring together the work of some of our finest writers on the subject they know best, discussing their own work and that of others, as well as concentrating on craft and other aspects of the writer's world.

Poet, novelist, biographer, and critic, Jay Parini is the author of numerous books, including The Apprentice Lover and One Matchless Time: A Life of William Faulkner. Currently he is D. E. Axinn Professor of English & Creative Writing at Middlebury College.

TITLES IN THE SERIES

Michael Collier

Make Us Wave Back: Essays on Poetry and Influence

Make Us Wave Back: Essays on Poetry and Influence
Michael Collier
<http://www.press.umich.edu/titleDetailDesc.do?id=192116>
The University of Michigan Press

Make Us Wave Back

Essays on Poetry and Influence

Michael Collier

The University of Michigan Press

Ann Arbor

Copyright © 2007 by Michael Collier
All rights reserved
Published in the United States of America by
The University of Michigan Press
Manufactured in the United States of America
⊗ Printed on acid-free paper

2010 2009 2008 2007 4 3 2 1

No part of this publication may be reproduced,
stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted in any form
or by any means, electronic, mechanical, or otherwise,
without the written permission of the publisher.

A CIP catalog record for this book is available from the British Library.

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Collier, Michael, 1953–

Make us wave back : essays on poetry and influence / Michael Collier.

p. cm. — (Writers on writing)

ISBN-13: 978-0-472-09947-4 (cloth : acid-free paper)

ISBN-10: 0-472-09947-7 (cloth : acid-free paper)

ISBN-13: 978-0-472-06947-7 (pbk. : acid-free paper)

ISBN-10: 0-472-06947-0 (pbk. : acid-free paper)

1. Poetry. 2. Poetics. I. Title.

PS3553.O474645M35 2007

813'.54—dc22

2007003222

Contents

PREFACE	VII
I.
One Utterance	3
An Exact Ratio	6
The Truant Pen	14
The Dog Gets to Dover: William Maxwell as a Correspondent	18
Becoming a Reader, Becoming a Writer	31
State Flower, Poet Laureate, State Song	34
The Look of Things	39
A Final Antidote	43
Borges and His Precursors	64
II.
A Familiar Gratuity	77
On Whitman's "To a Locomotive in Winter"	82
In Radical Pursuit: A Brief Appreciation of the Essays of W. D. Snodgrass	87
Introduction to Annie Dillard's Tickets for a Prayer Wheel	90
Widow's Choice: Randall Jarrell's Letters	93
The Wesleyan Tradition	103
III.
An Interview by Matt Barry	129
ACKNOWLEDGMENTS	159

Preface

IN PUTTING TOGETHER THIS COLLECTION of prose, written over a period of twenty years, I thought I had no choice but to adopt the method of the Roman Historian Ninius, who in compiling his History of Roman Britain “made a heap of all that I found.” Surprisingly, in the small heap made from these mostly occasional essays, I discovered a record of my most important literary influences, those writers who not only helped me to develop a literary temperament but who also helped to socialize and humanize me. Literary influence differs from the influence of family and place, which are largely involuntary and often unconscious, and as such it is the story of a writer’s deliberate attempt to find and make something like a literary home. These essays outline part of my attempt to make such a place in the world of writing. They also acknowledge the luck, fortune, and grace that mysteriously preside over the process that has brought me closer to the thing I most wanted to become, a writer and poet. Not so surprisingly, I discovered that these essays, especially the shorter ones, are an expression of certain preoccupations I have had over the years with the language of poetry and its various traditions, and they reflect the materials I have used as a teacher of literature and writing. It is my hope that these preoccupations intersect in interesting and perhaps provocative ways with the history of my influences as it stands so far.

I’m extremely grateful to Jay Parini for offering me the chance to compile these pieces, and to David Biespiel, who read the manuscript with careful attention, and to my wife, Katherine Branch, who encouraged me to finish the project and who gave me much editorial help.