

Contents

List of Tables and Illustrations	xv
A Note about Romanization	xvii
Chronology: Ch'in-Han Rulers and Reigns, 221 B.C.—A.D. 220	xix
Equivalents of Weights and Measures	xxi
General Abbreviations and Translations of Technical Terms	xxiii
Basic Terms: Ancient and Han Era Definitions and Usage and Modern Equivalents	xxv

Introduction: Scope, Sources, and Approaches	i
Prologue—From Tribes to Empire: An Anthropological Macrohistory of the State in Early China	9

PART I. FROM REBELS TO IMPERIALISTS: THE ORIGINS, FOUNDATIONS, AND PROCESS OF HAN EXPANSION

1. Han Wu-ti's New Empire: The Political, Social, Economic, and Ideological Foundations of Han Expansion and Frontier Development 67
2. War and Peace with the Hsiung-nu in Early Han China:
The Hsiung-nu Challenge and the Origins of Han Wu-ti's
Military Expansion 135
3. The Northern and Northwestern Campaigns under Han Wu-ti:
Cavalry, Professional Army, and the Military Revolution 161

PART 2. FROM THE MOVING FRONTIERS TO THE SETTLED
COLONIES: THE CHINESE EMPIRE EXPANDS

4. China Moves West: The Colonization of the Ho-hsi Region in the Former Han Period 191
5. The Han March to Inner Asia: The Colonization of the Western Regions in Former Han Times 215
- Conclusion: Expansion, Frontier, and Empire 239

Appendix 1. A Note on the Tu-wei Institution on the Han Frontier 267

Appendix 2. The Military Leadership in the Former Han
Period: A Cultural and Sociological Analysis 271

Appendix 3. On the Formation of the "Chinese" National Identity: Chung-kuo, Chung-kuo Jen, and Han-jen 293

Major Dynasties and Periods of China 297

Notes 299

Glossary 415

Sources 425

Index 433

About the Author 461